

CORRECTIONS

In a recent interview with Arena Magazine, there were a few factual errors:

1. I did not send out resumes cold. The Lianhe Wanbao job was advertised.
2. I worked 1.5 years at Lianhe Wanbao, then applied for a small company loan to begin my study at Missouri. And it was at Missouri that I won a few scholarships, which helped to finance part of my education. Otherwise, it was my family who paid for the bulk of my fees and expenses.
3. Hearts of Darkness (by Don McCullin) was not printed or published by Missouri. The book I was referring to in this instance was The Best of Photojournalism, which is a collection of winning images from the annual Picture of the Year contest, held at Missouri. Even that was not published by Missouri. I believe the publisher is Running Press.
4. Before 2007, I was the only Southeast Asian named as Hasselblad Master. In 2008, one Malaysian was selected. Before me, there were at least two mainland Chinese Hasselblad Masters.
